Stovewood Daze this weekend Saturday August 3rd-Jennings

Stovewood Daze will be held this Saturday, August 3rd at the Stovewood Museum in Jennings. For those not familiar with the old stovewood construction buildings on County B in Jennings, these structures are remnants from the area's colorful past, with a store, saloon and the living quarters of John Mecikalski and his family. The two buildings were faithfully restored through a grant from the Kohler Foundation some years back, and this event is one of the fundraisers that keep the museum open to the public.

Expect a step back in time to our early settlement time when you attend Stovewood Daze. Besides the displays of old tools, photos and other items in the museum, there will be events outside that will entertain and educate. The food at Stovewood Daze is always top notch, and the pig roast will be delicious. The bake sale will have you stocking up as well.

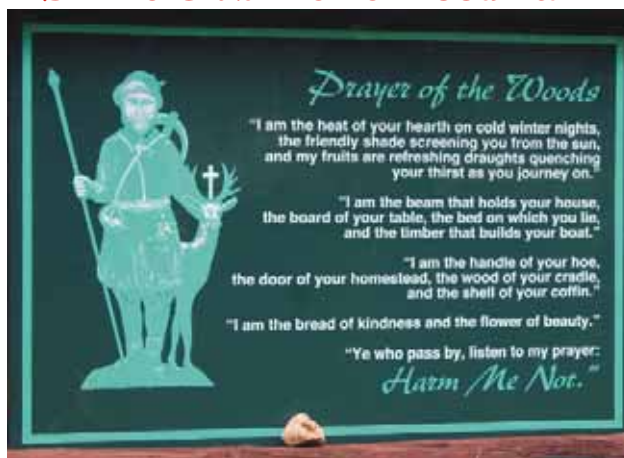

A display of antique cars, truck and tractors will appeal to some, live music by Ray Ehlinger will entertain you. You can watch lumber being sawed on a bandmill, and Mike Monte will talk about early logging history.

Memorial Bench in courthouse square to honor an early pioneer and his family

Ben Glinske, at Forest Granite at work on the memorial bench

By Mike Monte

A marble bench will be added to the courthouse square next Wednesday, August 7th. Eunice Jewell, a granddaughter of one of Forest County's early pioneer businessman and his family will be honored and remembered with the placement of the bench. Forest Granite is inscribing the bench with the name of Miles Standish Barker, the names of his descendants, and his accomplishments, and the list is long. Forest Granite is donating the inscription work and Ms. Jewell the cost of the bench.

Miles Standish Barker, was born in Maine, but lived most of his life in Crandon. He was one of the early pioneers who helped a fledgling community grow and prosper, and had the faith that the town would amount to something, and if it did, he would too.

Through the years, Barker would have his hand in numerous ventures. His general store/trading post that was located on Madison Street about where the Kennedy Law Office now stands was the community center for many years, starting around 1887. The store was supplied by stagecoach and wagon on Pelican Lake, where the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad brought in supplies needed by the Barker store.

Memorial Tree planted in Vetetan's Memorial Park

Members of the Do Nothing Club help plant the tree honoring Eldred Pagel

A tree was planted in the Veteran's Memorial Park on the south end of Lake Metonga last Monday. The maple is a memorial to Eldred Pagel who was in charge of the park for three years, starting in 1999. In the years following, he worked as the security person, quieting loud campers and making sure that the park was safe and secure after dark. Unfortunately, Eldred passed away unexpectedly back in January of this year.

A group of campers with about thirty years of tenure at the park and from a variety of towns around the state chipped in and bought the tree. They call themselves the "Do Nothing Club," and say this is the goal when camping at the park, to relax and do nothing. Eldred always made sure that they accomplished their goals and joined them at the campfire occasionally. They like him, and want him to be remembered.

Vets Pics Return to Lakewood Reunion

Just a few of the veterans picture that will be on display.

After receiving numerous requests, Rita Blazewicz has agreed to display her collection of veterans pictures at this year's 30th Annual Lakewood Reunion. The picture collecting began a year ago, to be a display at the reunion for "2012 - The Year of the Veteran". When the reunion was held, there were just over 50 pictures in the collection. Rita continued collecting pictures, and by Veterans' Day over 200 pictures were displayed at Wabeno High School and at Lakewood Super Valu. There is still more room on the display and if you, or a member of your family was in the service, Rita will add your picture to the collection. Send picture and basic service information to: Rita Thielke Blazewicz, 14245 Glenwood Lane, Lakewood, WI 54138, or e-mail to rjblaze@centurytel.net.

The 30th Annual Lakewood Reunion will be held on Saturday, August 31st, at Waubee Lake Lodge in Lakewood, Wisconsin. Cost for the evening is $20 per person. Tom Thielke will again have Lakewood memorabilia, and Faye Thielke will perform a vocal arrangement. A presentation of slides from previous reunions will run throughout the evening. Door prizes and trivia will also be part of the evening. If you are interested in attending the reunion, send name(s) and money to: Rita Thielke Blazewicz, 14245 Glenwood Lane, Lakewood, WI 54138, or e-mail torjblaze@centurytel.net.

Reporting deer observations helps biologists assess annual deer herd production

MADISON -- In an ongoing effort to include public input in deer management, and to effectively monitor and evaluate Wisconsin's deer herd, the Department of Natural Resources is continuing its annual citizen-science survey, Operation Deer Watch.

This unique collaboration of data from the public, along with deer observations collected by DNR staff, provides insight on the reproductive status of Wisconsin's deer herd in 2013. The number of does, bucks, and fawns seen are indicators of annual deer herd production.

"This is a fun and useful opportunity for the public to be the daily eyes and ears for the deer herd in their area," said Brian Dhuey, DNR surveys coordinator. "Citizens annually provide thousands of observations that the department utilizes in monitoring the herd."

To get involved, begin recording all bucks, does, and fawns seen between dawn and dusk during the period of Aug. 1 to Sept. 30. Daily observations can be tracked using a tally sheet that is available at dnr.wi.gov, search keywords "deer watch." Observations can be submitted at the same web site.

"This year, 14,000 deer hunters were selected at random and sent a letter inviting them to participate in Operation Deer Watch," said Dhuey. "However, if you were not one of the hunters selected to participate we still encourage your participation to help provide insight into Wisconsin's deer herd."

For more information, videos, and results of previous years, search the DNR website for keywords "deer watch."

The entrance fee automatically enrolls an individual in Shrine Club membership. For ages 12 and up to 61, the fee is $15. Senior citizens aged 62 and up are assessed a $10 fee. For kids aged 5-11, the charge is $5. Those age four and under are not charged.

The picnic begins at 11 a.m. with a Mass before the Shrine to St. Hubert, Patron Saint of Hunters. At noon, following Mass, the serving lines will be open and remain so for the rest of the afternoon. To reach the Shrine from Highway 8, follow the Shrine Road, located just west of Goodman, north, for just over six miles. Part of it is paved, but soon the road becomes gravel and dirt. Signs along the way indicate how many miles remain before the site. Parking areas are available for ATV's as well as larger vehicles. Those who are familiar with the area, may discover other roads that lead to the Shrine.

Fifty-five years ago, the Shrine Club was founded when hunters met along the creek and in the open area to rest and to count that everyone in a party was there and okay. The idyllic spot in the wilderness served as a gathering place. Over the years, the site has progressed with bathroom facilities added, as well as the Shrine to St. Hubert. With the decent death of Ted Sopkowicz, only two of the founders, Mike Murphy and Patrick Murphy, remain. They were teenagers at the founding.

In keeping with the picnic atmosphere, and the looking out for local hunters and townspeople, the relaxed gathering focuses on camaraderie. As a hallowed place, Mass begins the day. Along the stream bed will be a location for children to gather for activities with Barbara Tater, again, in charge of the younger set. No charge is involved. A Forget-Me-Not flower garden has been added as well as brass name plates to remember loved ones.

Though the emphasis is on the food and the togetherness, the Shrine Club picnic also serves as a fundraiser.

"The proceeds," Ash said, "go to local needs." Victims of fire, for example, and those community members or organizations who could use some assistance.

Tickets for a raffle with the numbers drawn in late afternoon have been placed at area businesses and are being sold by Shrine Club members. The top prize is a gun, followed by a gun blind, a gun cabinet, and cash awards. Throughout the afternoon, tickets will be sold until the drawings. Also, donated raffle items will be available for chances in a low pressure atmosphere. This is the Club's only fundraiser.

Ash also noted that all the help is from volunteers, and that new volunteers are always welcome. Treasurer is Tim Kowalkowski, and Tim Nulph serves as vice president.

Surveys show healthy duck populations

MADISON – With high continental total duck and wetland numbers, state waterfowl biologists expect a 60-day duck season similar to recent years but with the possibility of bag limit changes for certain species. This information comes after the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service released continental duck numbers in the Trends in Duck Breeding Populations report [PDF] [exit DNR] on July 12.

"This continental survey information is an essential piece in determining Wisconsin's waterfowl season frameworks," said Kent Van Horn, migratory game bird ecologist for the Department of Natural Resources. "The information we are seeing is promising for the upcoming season."

The 2013 North American total duck population estimate was 45.6 million, which is the second highest on record and 33 percent above the long-term average. The 2012 estimate was the highest estimate on record and 6 percent above 2013.

Wetland numbers across the survey area were up from last year and 35 percent above the long-term average.

Mallard numbers were estimated at 10.4 million, similar to last year and 36 percent above the long-term average. Most other species estimates were above or at the long-term average.

"With high mallard numbers and good wetland conditions, we are confident there will be a 60-day duck season," said Van Horn. "However, hunters should be aware of potential bag limit changes for canvasback and scaup."

"While canvasback and scaup make up a relatively small percentage of the overall Wisconsin harvest, these species are important to many duck hunters," said Van Horn. "We may see changes to their daily bag limits in 2013."

Breeding canvasbacks were estimated at 787,000, similar to 2012 counts and 37 percent above the long-term average. This may allow for an increase to a two canvasback daily bag.

Scaup estimates were at 4.2 million, which was 20 percent below 2012 and 17 percent below the long-term average. This is similar to most recent years. The scaup harvest strategy is expected to call for a return to a two bird daily bag limit from last year's four bird bag.

The Canada geese that breed in northern Ontario, and known as the Mississippi Valley Population, make up about 60 percent of Wisconsin's regular season goose harvest. These geese had a late start to the breeding season, but surveys indicated good production and low nest predation. Breeding estimates for 2013 were at 319,693. This is up 16 percent from last year but 10 percent below the long-term average after several prior years with lower recruitment.

Wisconsin DNR staff are currently in discussions at the Mississippi Flyway Council meeting and will have more information in time for the early August public waterfowl meetings and hearings [PDF]. For more information on waterfowl hunting, search the DNR website

Senior Chatter

Submitted by Kate Schultz

Exercise for the Elderly

The benefits of exercise throughout life are often touted. But is it safe for seniors older than 65 years to exercise? Absolutely. According to the American Academy of Family Physicians almost all older people can benefit from additional physical activity. Regular exercise protects from chronic disease, improves mood and lowers chances of injury.

With age, the body does take a little longer to repair itself, but moderate physical activity is good for people of all ages and of ability levels. In fact, the benefits of your elderly parents exercising regularly far outweigh the risks. Even elderly people with chronic illnesses can exercise safely. Many medical conditions are improved with exercise, including Alzheimer's and dementia, heart disease, diabetes, colon cancer, high blood pressure and obesity.

Regular exercise provides a myriad of health benefits in your mom and dad, including improvements in blood pressure, diabetes, lipid profile, osteoarthritis, osteoporosis, and neuro-cognitive function. Regular exercise improves:

Immune Function - A healthy, strong body fights off infection and sickness more easily and more quickly. Rather than sapping energy reserves entirely, recovery from illness should be less strenuous.

Cardio-Respiratory and Cardiovascular Function - Regular physical activity lowers risk of heart disease and high blood pressure. If the elderly person has hypertension, exercise will lower blood pressure.

Bone Density/Osteoporosis - Exercise protects against loss in bone mass. Better bone density will reduce the risk of osteoporosis and lowers risk of falling and broke bones. Post-menopausal women can lose as much as 2 percent bone mass each year and men also lose bone mass as they age. Research done at Tufts University shows that strength training can dramatically reduce the loss of bone mass, help restore bones, and contribute to better balance and less fractures.

Gastrointestinal Function - Regular exercise promotes the efficient elimination of waste and encourages digestive health.

Chronic Conditions and Cancer - Regular physical activity lowers risk of Alzheimer's disease and dementia, diabetes, obesity, heart disease, osteoporosis and colon cancer, to name just a few. It also helps in the management of high cholesterol and arthritis pain.

Regular physical activity is also associated with decreased mortality and age-related morbidity in older adults. In addition, a study by the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society examined exercise in the elderly and found that exercise training led to improvement in functional reach, balance and fear of falling.

Often, frail elderly people are unable to tolerate aerobic exercise routines on a regular basis due to lack of endurance. But while age related changes in the cardiovascular system have significant effects on cardiac performance, it has been estimated that 50% of endurance loss can be related to decreased muscle mass.

The ideal exercise prescription for the elderly consists of three components: aerobic exercise, strength training, and balance and flexibility.

Reporting deer observations helps assess annual deer herd production

MADISON -- In an ongoing effort to include public input in deer management, and to effectively monitor and evaluate Wisconsin's deer herd, the Department of Natural Resources is continuing its annual citizen-science survey, Operation Deer Watch.

This unique collaboration of data from the public, along with deer observations collected by DNR staff, provides insight on the reproductive status of Wisconsin's deer herd in 2013. The number of does, bucks, and fawns seen are indicators of annual deer herd production.

"This is a fun and useful opportunity for the public to be the daily eyes and ears for the deer herd in their area," said Brian Dhuey, DNR surveys coordinator. "Citizens annually provide thousands of observations that the department utilizes in monitoring the herd."

To get involved, begin recording all bucks, does, and fawns seen between dawn and dusk during the period of Aug. 1 to Sept. 30. Daily observations can be tracked using a tally sheet that is available at dnr.wi.gov, search keywords "deer watch." Observations can be submitted at the same web site.

"This year, 14,000 deer hunters were selected at random and sent a letter inviting them to participate in Operation Deer Watch," said Dhuey. "However, if you were not one of the hunters selected to participate we still encourage your participation to help provide insight into Wisconsin's deer herd."

For more information, videos, and results of previous years, search the DNR website for keywords "deer watch."

Public hearings set on changes to statewide shoreland zoning

MADISON – Proposed changes to minimum statewide shoreland zoning standards aimed at providing more flexibility for property owners and making the standards easier for counties to implement are the topic of public hearings in August. People also may file comments electronically or by U.S. mail through Sept. 5.

Since Wisconsin revised the minimum statewide shoreland zoning standards in 2009, some counties expressed concerns that the revisions would be administratively difficult to implement and enforce, according to Russ Rasmussen, deputy administrator for the Department of Natural Resources Water Division.

To respond to those concerns, DNR convened a stakeholder group and developed proposed changes that answered the concerns while attempting to meet the standards' original intent of preserving and restoring natural shoreline plants and limiting hard surfaces near the water to help protect water quality, provide fish and wildlife habitat, and provide natural scenic beauty.

"We think the stakeholder group has helped us achieve a balance between answering the concerns of some counties and providing more flexibility for property owners while continuing to protect clean water and habitat," Rasmussen said.

Specifically, the changes propose greater flexibility for properties along developed shorelines. Under the current rules, properties within 300 feet of any lake, river or stream face limits on the amount of roofs, pavement, and other hard or "impervious" surfaces. Under DNR's proposed changes, base limits on impervious services would remain at 15 percent in most places statewide, but could be up to 40 percent for residences, and up to 60 percent for commercial, industrial or business land, within those urbanized areas where the shoreline is highly developed.

Property owners can seek a permit for projects that would add impervious surfaces to their land, or seek a variance. The proposed changes would raise the levels at which such permits or variances are required in urbanized areas and allow more flexibility for properties where the impervious surfaces are draining away from the lake or to a storm-water system designed to treat the runoff.

The proposed changes also allow for more expansion of homes built before the late 1960s, when the statewide minimum shoreland standards were originally set and established that structures needed to be set back 75 feet from the water's edge.

Under the proposed changes, property owners of existing structures closer to the water than the longtime state standards would be allowed to expand their structures beyond the 75 foot setback in any direction. The current rule limits people to expanding vertically in the same footprint.

There are three ways for people to weigh in on the proposed changes – testify at public hearings, file comments electronically, or provide them by U.S. mail.

Public hearings are set in five communities in August, with all hearings starting at 2 p.m. with a brief presentation and lasting until 6 p.m.

Aug. 7, Greenville – Town of Greenville, W6860 Parkview Dr., Greenville.

Aug. 8, Delafield - 500 Genesee Street, Delafield WI 53018 Aug. 14, Tomah – Best Western Tomah Hotel, 1017 E McCoy Blvd.

Aug. 15, – Spooner – Spooner High School – 801 County Road A.

Aug. 22 – Tomahawk – Rodeway Inn & Suites, 1738 Comfort Dr.

People may also send comments on proposed permanent natural resources rules over the internet at through the DNR website or through the Wisconsin Administrative Rules website (exit DNR). Written comments can be sent by U.S. mail to Bureau of Watershed Management P.O. Box 7921 Madison, WI 53707 or by email to DNRNR115COMMENTS@wisconsin.gov. For more information on the shoreland zoning program search the DNR website for "shoreland."

The store also served as a post office. Mrs. Robert Purdy, sister of M.S. Barker, wrote about life in the store and post office. She describes how people came in the late afternoon to pick up their mail. When the stage was late, the waiting people turned the time into a social event, with story-telling, laughter and good times spent with neighbors in an early wilderness town.

The Barker family lived upstairs. Later on, Barker built a house on Lake Avenue and removed the partitions in his former home. The large room was called the "Hall," and used for community functions.

Native Americans used the Barker store as a place to trade their products for items like flour or corn meal, cloth, and other needs. They traded venison, deer skins, wild rice and other products that gathered from the woods and waters. Strong friendships were made between Barker and his Chippewa customers, and a respect for each other was formed, leading to Barker helping settle a tribal dispute. His judgement was trusted, and he was considered to be a fair man. The dispute was settled, and the Chippewa presented Barker a medal that was awarded by President Monroe. The medal is thought to have been given by the government to the Potawatomi originally, and ending up in the hands of the Chippewa, possibly as a trade item.

The Barker store's business actually suffered when the C&NW ran a spur from Pelican Lake to Crandon. With the rail line came the big Page & Landeck sawmill on Clear Lake, and their modern brick department store, now the home of Subway, Group Therapy and She's All That, took many of Barker's customers away. The store was sold, and the new owner continued on for awhile, but the building was eventually destroyed by fire.

But Barker was an enterprising fellow. He had one of the first farms in the county, on the southwestern end of Lake Metonga. He served as a judge for number of years. He also had an ice business, harvesting ice from Metonga in the winter and storing it in an icehouse to sell to people for their iceboxes that were the early type of refrigeration. He traded for ginseng with tribal members and had one of the first, and maybe the biggest, ginseng farms in Wisconsin.

Miles Barker and his wife Hattie were very successful in their efforts. They helped settle a wilderness and raised ten kids doing it. Their son, George, took over the farming operation, called Lakeside Dairy Farm, and ran the business for years, raising produce and supplying fresh milk and cream to residents of Crandon.

An interesting note is that George Barker was in the second graduating class in Crandon, and that he was the only graduate. As a class of one, high school reunions must have been lightly attended!

Eunice Jewell remembered her grandmother as an industrious woman. Miles and Hattie moved to southern Wisconsin to live with her father George after he relocated to the southern end of the state to farm. Eunice said she always had fresh, fried cakes for family gatherings, kept the family in mittens using a special knitting pattern, used her beautiful handwriting to keep in touch with her children and grandchildren, and kept an open door to family and friends who wanted to visit.

Other endeavors by Miles Barker included being County Board Chair, operating a bakery, logging, and serving as an Indian Agent. As an Indian agent, Barker had a leg up on others interested in the job, as he was fluent in speaking the Chippewa language. Miles and Hattie exhibited little fear in taking on new careers and business ventures.

In time, the sons and daughters of Miles and Hattie married and there are many family branches, including these families: Mountain, Steagall, Marvin, Knuth, Stevens, Derickson, Cronce, Scorey, Ewald, Boodry, and many more.

After Wednesday, you will be able to walk by the Senior Snoop Shop and take a little breather on the attractive bench being erected on Wednesday, and when you do take time to thank this pioneering family for all they contributed to Forest County and the City of Crandon.

Miles was born in 1857 and passed in 1941. Hattie was born in 1863 and laid to rest in 1951.
