Sheriff Dennee's thoughts on the jail/courthouse project

By Mike Monte

In an interview with Sheriff Dennee, he laid out his thoughts on the current jail/courthouse project.

According to Dennee, the biggest problem facing him and the employees of the Forest County Law Enforcement Center is the separation of the dispatch center from the jail. Currently, the dispatcher also works as one of the jail control board officers. Obviously, if there is an emergency call and a disturbance among the inmates, it is a problem. Which situation is handled first? It takes what should be dedicated attention to the call away from the call to handle the problem in the jail. His goal is to have dedicated dispatch staff handling emergency calls and subsequently dispatched to the appropriate officer or fire and rescue.

There is also a problem with walking inmates that are scheduled for a court appearance. The current climate of criminality in the area brings fear of a possible attempt on the lives of inmates and the possible injury of officers moving that inmate.

Another problem is the overcrowding of female inmates. There are more female inmates than ever before in the history of Forest County. According to state statute, there are rules that govern the detainment of inmates, and it is increasingly harder to meet these requirements for the female population of our jail.

The classification of all inmates is also mandated by the State Department of Corrections. Due to the current structure and population of our jail, we don't always meet these requirements. The state has allowed us to continue to function for now with the facility we have.

Dennee said he was as surprised as everybody else when the brochure pushing a $26 million project showed up in his mailbox. His goal was to update the current jail, provide more cells and a secure courtroom that didn't put inmates or officers at risk when moving an inmate to their day in court.

This information was put to the county board back in 2011, 2013 and in 2016. Not having the authority or any vote in the matter, it was up to the county board to come up with solutions. Hopefully, he said, the time has come to solve the problems facing the Sheriff's Department, even if these changes are phased in over a period of years, at a cost that is affordable to the taxpayers. He said that as a taxpayer himself, and as someone who is responsible for performing his duties in the most cost-effective manner possible, he is not in favor of a huge expenditure.

With the brochure bringing out the idea of tearing down the 1909 courthouse, the original issue, the Law Enforcement Center, was lost in the uproar.

He thinks affordable solutions can be arrived at for both the jail and the current courthouse.

Kassidy has been involved in several other school related extracurricular activities, including forensics, FCCLA, Rebel Drama, choir, band, Student Council and Rachel's Challenge. She also serves as the Co-President on Wabeno Student Council. She is a pro at fundraising (just ask her coaches and advisors) and holds a few records having the highest sales in many fundraising events for her school or sport. Along with all her school activities, she finds the time to volunteer her time to her

Forest County Building Committee meets

By Mike Monte

The Forest County Building Committee met on Monday, June 4th. Mr. Cihasky, the architect from Wendel, was in attendance, as was Mr. Berner from the Samuels Group and the citizen members of the committee.

If you attend these meetings, you will be very aware that this project isn't going to be done in the short term. There is a great deal of work to be done in the planning stages. Needs have to be assessed, costs weighed against benefits, the cost to the taxpayers and lots of discussion.

At the Monday meeting, the architect presented the results of the programming phase of the needs of the 1909 courthouse. Programming is the first step in the process. The next step is the schematic design, and the final phase is design and development.

Meeting on the Forest County mining ordinance

By Mike Monte

On Thursday, May 30th, the Forest County Land and Water Conservation Committee met to discuss the proposed county mining ordinance and possibly pass that ordinance on to the full county board for approval on June 19th. According to state statute, all counties must have a mining ordinance in place by July 1st.

The committee has produced a draft document that was discussed at this meeting. In addition, questions were taken from the audience as well as comments. State Senator Tiffany was present, and there were a number of questions directed at the senator as well.

Tina VanZile, the Sokaogon Environmental Director, was present and expressed her disappointment with the document.

VanZile voiced her concerns over the controls on bulk sampling. Bulk sampling is when a large quantity of material is removed from the ground for testing. This could amount to 10,000 tons of material, or the equivalent of 650 dump truck loads. She advised the committee to rethink this issue.

She also didn't like the idea to start a citizen Continued on page 03

For Old Time's Sake

You are driving on Hwy 45 and you get to Pelican Lake. Wait! This doesn't look like Pelican Lake! It surely doesn't, but if you were coming in on the train before the turn of the last century, this is what you would see. People traveling to Crandon rode the train to Pelican Lake and had to take a stagecoach over a terrible road to get to Crandon back then. The spur from Pelican Lake to Crandon wasn't completed until 1901. Obviously, almost all of the buildings in this photo are long gone. Most were not likely to have been built for the long term anyway. Even Hwy 45 has changed a bit!

Trump signs Johnson's Right to Try Bill into law

WASHINGTON — Senator Ron Johnson (R-Wis.), chairman of the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, issued the following statement Wednesday after President Trump signed into law S.204, the Trickett Wendler, Frank Mongiello, Jordan McLinn, and Matthew Bellina Right to Try Act of 2017. Last week, the House passed Johnson's bill, which is aimed at allowing terminally ill patients, their doctors, and pharmaceutical manufacturers to administer investigational medical treatments to patients with lifethreatening diseases. The Senate passed S.204 in August of 2017:

"Today's right to try bill signing was a moment of deserved celebration for everyone who fought to return a little freedom and restore hope to terminally ill patients and their families. I applaud and thank them all. However, bureaucracies rarely cede their authority over our lives without a fight. So, we must — and we will — remain vigilant that these hard-won freedoms are implemented and preserved as intended."

committee on the mining issue within 30 days of the announcement by a mining company of their intent to mine. She advised that the committee should be started now, so it is in place and knowledgeable when and if this intent occurs. In addition, she thought that any committee should have a member from each tribal community.

VanZile also asked if there would be fees levied for mining permits, and questioned whether or not the proposed ordinance gave away local authority. She also expressed concerns for proper distances of setbacks and buffer zones to accommodate blasting and setup of a time period for blasting so neighbors wouldn't be disturbed throughout the day and night.

VanZile warned that the county board was in for a rude awakening. She pointed out that once contamination has started underground, it can't be controlled and that a general liability policy won't cover environmental problems.

She finished with the statement that the tribes that own the former Crandon Mine ore body are never going to mine it, despite the rumors that pop up, and that they are protecting the land and water for their kids, grandkids and future generations.

Committee Chair Karl Tauer stated that this ordinance is just the beginning, and has to be in place by July 1st. It gives the county a start and will cover us for now.

Dick Krawze spoke up at the hearing. He said he has talked to knowledgeable people, and while he has some concerns, he thinks they can mine safely with the current laws. He expressed concerns about the future of the county.

State Senator Tom Tiffany spoke up. While he has demonstrated that he is a fan of mining in northern Wisconsin, he was adamant in saying that the current laws governing mining will protect the environment. While his explanation may be too lengthy to get into here, there were some points that deserve mention.

He spoke of a maintenance and repair bond that would stay in place for 250 years. He also said that there would be no local preemption, which means that control would not be taken from local governments and given to the state. According to the senator, when a company files a notice of intent to mine, they have to wait a year, giving local governments a chance to understand the situation and put local controls in place.

He talked about the draft ordinance that was brought into the meeting and said he didn't like the super majority, and thought it should be a simple majority for the board to decide whether to approve or not approve a local agreement between a mining company and the county.

In the committee meeting that followed the hearing, the issue of a super majority or a simple majority was discussed. The committee voted to make it a simple

The ordinance was voted unanimously to pass, and it will be passed on to the full board meeting on June 19 for possible passage by the entire county board.

It should be added, that at this time, no mining company has announced their intent to mine in Forest County. Rumors abound, however, and while this ordinance could be looked at as a bare bones ordinance, it does provide some protection to the citizens. The document can also be altered in the future.

For Old Time's Sake

This, we think, is an architect's drawing of what is now the old jail and sheriff's residence. The building dates from the 1940's. It was likely what the architect used to sell the building concept to the county board, and he did a very good job making the proposed building look appealing. The image was found in the Pioneer antique picture file.

Time has passed, and the old structure is now just used for storage, but does have the potential to be remodeled into offices should the need arise. The current architectural firm and the representative of the planning group think the building should be razed and another put in its place, but there is resistance on the building committee to follow this advice. Time will tell on the fate of this pretty structure; will it be torn down or repaired and used for future county business?

To the Editor:

I was unable to attend the county board meeting this week on Mining, but I did watch the video .

If I am correct in understanding what type of mining that is in question in Forest County, it would be mining for gold, silver and zinc; Sulfide Mining. Unless I missed something, the type of mining needs to be IDENTIFIED, not just say 'MINING'.

Here are listed of topics to check out, it is about Sulfide Mining and Mining: www.sosbluewaters.org www.miningtruth.org www.savethewildup.org

These topics talk about mining. A couple more to look up are Picher, Oklahoma to read what went on in that town with the mining for silver, gold, etc., Ladysmith, Wisconsin, right in our back yard.

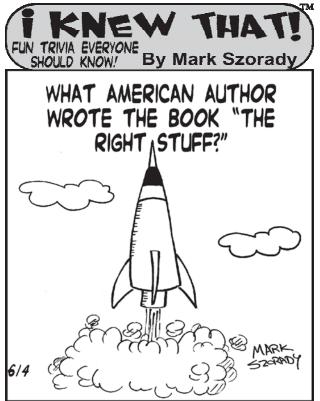

The sites I mentioned above need to be checked out and see what has taken place with sulfide mining. We have acquaintances that have worked in this mining field, and they have said there is pollution with this type of mining. Don't kid yourself that the mining company will be careful, all you need is one little slip, where it enters the water table and we are done.

Why didn't Senator Tiffany mention that in his comments? He did state Minnesota and Michigan have mining, but it is iron ore mining, not sulfide mining, big difference. Iron ore Mining is different, than sulfide mining. There is total destruction with pollution from sulfide mining. If any of the materials reach the water table, or any body of water, we are Done. We need water in order to survive, as well as the plants and animals. It is all for MONEY? IS THAT MORE IMPORTANT THAN HUMAN LIFE? There is an old saying out there; "Money is the Root of All Evil". It seems our country is all about MONEY, doesn't matter what pollution is cause, what or who is affected by the destruction caused over a number of circumstances. I guess one could say GREED , the more one has, the more one wants. I also think that the state representatives would GLADLY LIFT ALL STRICT MINING REGULATIONS TO APPEASE THE MINING COMPANIES. Makes one wonder why? What is more important, our total ENVIRONMENT or MONEY???

I don't understand why elected officials are so aggressive in promoting the mining, would they be, if this type of mining were to be in their own back yard? Bet not I agree with Tina VanZile, (sorry if misspelled), but we need to NOT HAVE ANY MINING DONE IN FOREST COUNTY.

I hope our county board members think about this mining issue Long and Hard, Make any amendments STRICT WITH VOTING ON ISSUES INVOLVING MINING. I personally don't feel that this is Economic Development, I see it as MAJOR POLLUTION FOR THE COUNTY for Eons. Forest County as you now know it, will be NO LONGER AND NEVER WILL BE ONCE POLLUTION FROM THE SULFIDE MINE IS DONE.

Just my comments, Barbara A. Majewski

Tax Law Change Impacting Forgiveness of Student Loan Debt By the GWAAR Legal Services Team

The outstanding student loan debt in America has increased to over $1.3 trillion. Of this debt, seniors owe $67 billion and, on average, each senior who has student loan debt owes $23,500. Seniors used the bulk of the loans to pay for children's or grandchildren's education.

Under most circumstances, borrowers cannot erase student loan debt under bankruptcy protection. Moreover, the federal government can garnish Social Security payments to cover federally backed student loan payments. This forces seniors to survive on a small portion of monthly benefit checks and cut back on other expenses, such as medical and food costs.

forgiven, their taxable income would be increased by $40,000.

P8

Fortunately, recent changes in the federal tax law may prevent some borrowers from having to pay federal income taxes on the student loan debt that was forgiven. Borrowers whose student loans are forgiven on or after January 1, 2018 due to "death or total and permanent disability," are no longer required to pay federal income taxes on those forgiven loans.

Now, when the Department of Education or a private lender forgives a student loan due to a borrower's death or disability, the amount of forgiven debt no longer counts as income and does not cause a borrower's federal taxes to go up. Before this change, some borrowers with disabilities or those unable to work faced financial distress driven by a tax bill because they qualified for debt relief.

However, some borrowers may qualify to have their federal student loans forgiven. Borrowers who are considered totally and permanently disabled (TPD) may be eligible to have their federal student loans forgiven.

This includes:

• Veterans who the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) has determined are unemployable due to a serviceconnected disability;

• Borrowers receiving Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits; and Borrowers certified as "totally and permanently disabled" by a physician.

Each option has different requirements for the supporting documentation that a borrower must submit to the Department of Education with the borrower's TPD discharge application. Additionally, some private student lenders also offer disability discharge options for borrowers with disabilities. Lenders that offer these programs may use guidelines that differ from the Department of Education to determine eligibility.

There used to be a catch-22 when borrowers had their student loans forgiven. The Internal Revenue Service treated any amount a borrower had forgiven as income. As a result, student loan forgiveness was taxable in many situations. This meant that if a borrower had $40,000 Bus driver: Dan Pedersen

The Geocache Challenge!

Tapping into what has become a global network of ongoing geocache events, Forest County's CAN! coalition is sponsoring a countywide geocache challenge beginning June 4th and ending August 31, 2018.

The aim of the geocache challenge is to encourage Forest County residents, both young and old, to get outside and explore the amazing hiking, walking and biking trails that Forest County offers.

Ten separate caches have been placed on established Forest County trails, including the county owned Otter Springs Trail system, the Wolf River Trail, the Wabeno Boardwalk, the Nicolet State Trail, Ed's Lake trail system and the Rat River Recreational Trail.

The coordinates for each of the ten caches can be found by visiting www.forestcountycan.org or by picking up a challenge brochure at the Forest County Health Department, Forest County UW-Extension office or at a Forest County public library.

Geocaching has become an enormously popular outdoor-enthusiast sport throughout the world for both children and adults. It combines treasure hunting with outdoor recreation and hiking, as well as technology. A handheld GPS device, or a smart phone with the Geocaching.com app installed is necessary.

The Forest County Ties that Bind Us also believe Geocaching to be a healthy way to get out on the trails of Forest County and therefore have purchased three handheld GPS units for loan through each of Forest county's public libraries. Information on using and loaning these devices will be shared at a group instruction to be held at the Otter Spring Trail system on July 10th from 4 - 7 p.m. Participants wanting to get started now on this challenge may use the Geocaching App (available on Iphone and Android devices) or use their own handheld GPS device. Coordinates are available at www.forestcountycan.org. Participants that have successfully located and documented the ten caches placed by the CAN! coalition can submit their completed tracking log to the Forest County Health Department by August 31, 2018 to receive their geocaching prize pack. According to Jill Krueger, Forest county health department "We really want people to get outside, be active and enjoy Forest county trails. Geocaching offers one more reason to do so. You might get hooked and end up searching for more of the thousands of other geocache treasures stashed across the county, the state of Wisconsin and beyond!" For more information, and a complete list of the CAN! challenge coordinates, visit www.forestcountycan.org or call the Forest County Health Department at 715-478-3371.

Nicolet's all-online Business Management program fits well around Albrecht's busy life

Like many working parents with young children, Pam Albrecht's life is a seemingly continuous swirl of activity.

There are meals to prepare, laundry to do, a job to work, and a steady stream of dance classes, baseball games, and even a few ice races in winter on snowmobiles and four-wheelers.

"Yeah, we're pretty busy but we manage to get everything done," she said.

Everything, in Albrecht's case, also includes being a student in Nicolet College's Business Management program. But instead of traditional classes that meet at set times during the day, she's completing the program entirely online.

"It would be nearly impossible for me to attend college without the flexibility of online classes," said Albrecht, who recently finished the first year of the twoyear associate's degree program. "It's really nice to complete the coursework during the times that work best with my schedule. I really needed something that was all online.'

While some people may have the impression that attending online classes is a rather solitary experience and that you're pretty much on your own, Albrecht said that's not the case at all.

"There's all kinds of support, a whole network, that you can draw on whenever you need it," Albrecht explained. "Help is always there. The instructors really care about you. You can call them with questions, email them, and also meet with them in person if that option works for you. They really want to see you succeed."

Albrecht also said she commonly uses online tutoring services and online discussion boards, the equivalent of a large group chat for all students in a given class, to ask questions and complete coursework. "There are all kinds of resources available " she

The Wendel firm has prowled all the rooms and departments of the courthouse, and laid out this information to the attendees. There were a few shocked looks, when the information described some of the offices as being inadequate in size. According to Wendel, the current courthouse facility needs 15-20,000 more square feet to function efficiently. That being said, there were some departments that would have enough space if the interior was reconfigured.

The next building to be programmed will be the jail, which is where this building project originated in the first place, and where there are definite problems. (See the interview with Sheriff Dennee on the front page of this issue.)

During this meeting, Chairman Bunda announced that they want to put this project in "park" so the combined committee of board members and citizens can digest the info and discuss it. The point is that Bunda wants to get the ideas from the committee and slow down the process and get a better understanding of what the major problems are balanced against what the taxpayers can afford.

This doesn't mean that the programming won't be done on the jail, but it does mean that there will be time for a good discussion and free flow of ideas on courthouse problems from the members of the building committee after being briefed by the architect.

The locations of the stations are: Silver Lake Beach in Laona, Crandon City Beach on Lake Metonga, and Veteran's Memorial Park on Lake Metonga.

Wisconsin state law requires there to be one flotation device per person in each vessel. The hope is that these Life Jacket Loaner Stations will encourage compliance with state law as well as promote safe swimming.

This project was successfully completed in 2017 with the help of our partners: The Forest County Association of Lakes, Lake Metonga Association, Silver Lake Association, Crandon Lion's Club, Laona Lion's Club, City of Crandon, Town of Laona, Forest County Forestry and Parks Department, and K2Pro Signs.

Throughout the 2017 swimming and boating season it was evident that the life jackets were being used by the general public. The Forest County Health Department received positive feedback on the success of the Life Jacket Loaner Stations promoting safety on the water for boaters and swimmers alike.

Natural Resources Board approves 2018 deer harvest

quotas and season structure

MADISON - The Wisconsin Natural Resources Board approved the 2018 antlerless deer quotas, harvest authorization levels and deer hunting season framework at its May 23 meeting in Madison.

The 2018 deer season framework represents the efforts of the County Deer Advisory Councils to move the deer herd in each county toward a three-year population objective of increasing, maintaining or decreasing the herd. This is the councils' fourth year developing deer management recommendations that consider both scientific herd metrics and public feedback. This year, the public submitted over 7,000 comment forms online during the April 2-12 public comment period in addition to input provided directly at council meetings.

"Department staff would like to thank the CDACs for their continued involvement and commitment to playing an important role in deer management--that said, the main influencer on guota levels, particularly in the north, were late April storms," said Kevin Wallenfang, Department of Natural Resources deer and elk ecologist. "We've seen an increase in population estimates and harvest figures for the past few years, which we expected to continue this year; however, all of the northern counties reduced antlerless quotas to take into account the impacts of the late winter."

Wallenfang says that in the farmland regions of the state, councils continue to use a variety of tagging and season options to address higher deer number. Hunters will again have the opportunity to harvest multiple deer and enjoy extended hunting opportunities.

Iron County is the only deer management unit that will be restricted to buck harvest only in 2018. The antlerless quota for the rest of Wisconsin will be 233,690 antlerless deer (compared to 276,515 in 2017).

A total of 44,000 public-access land bonus antlerless deer harvest authorizations (formerly known as deer tags) will be offered for public-access lands (compared to 31,945 in 2017), while 181,200 will be offered for private lands (compared to 168,210 in 2017). Bonus antlerless harvest authorization sales will occur as follows (sales begin each day at 10 a.m.):

Monday, Aug. 13 - Northern and Central Forest zones; Tuesday, Aug. 14 - Central Farmland Zone:

Wednesday, Aug. 15 - Southern Farmland Zone; and Thursday, Aug. 16 - all remaining bonus harvest authorizations can be purchased until sold out or the season ends.

In addition, Farmland (Zone 2) antlerless harvest authorizations are available through gowild.wi.gov for both public and private land with the purchase of every deer hunting license. The number of authorizations offered will depend on the county deer management unit, which must be selected at the time of issuance.

A Holiday Hunt will be held within 19 counties, offering an additional antlerless-only opportunity for firearm hunters from Dec. 24, 2018 to Jan. 1, 2019. As a reminder, archery and crossbow hunters in these counties are also restricted to antlerless harvest during the time of this hunt.

New in 2018, 12 counties holding a Holiday Hunt have extended the archery and crossbow season to Jan. 31, 2019. The extended archery and crossbow season will be open to both buck and antlerless deer harvest.

To help hunters prepare for the 2018 deer season, multiple resources will be posted on the department's deer hunting web page. Hunters are encouraged to check this page frequently leading up to the season. The following documents [all PDF] are now available at dnr.wi.gov, keyword "deer":

Data collected during the 2017-18 winter tracking reveal overwinter minimum wolf count of 905-944 in Wisconsin

MADISON - Following continued monitoring efforts, data suggest that Wisconsin's wolf population may have begun to stabilize and remains above established recovery goals. Data collected by over 100 volunteer trackers and Department of Natural Resources staff during the 2017-18 winter reveal an overwinter minimum wolf count of 905-944 wolves [PDF], a 2.2 percent decrease from the 925-956 wolves detected during the 2016-17 count [PDF]. The number of packs detected increased slightly, from 232 packs last year to 238 this past winter. Wisconsin's wolf population had been increasing consistently over the past 25 years.

Wolves in Wisconsin remain listed under the Federal Endangered Species Act and management authority is held by the federal government. Federal listing status restricts state management, including any lethal wolf management tools.

"The Endangered Species Act did its job--its protections were instrumental in allowing this species to successfully reestablish itself within our wildlife community," said Scott Walter, DNR large carnivore ecologist. "However, the population has been well established recovery goals for two decades and there is no biological reason for wolves to remain on the endangered species list. Federal delisting would allow more flexibility in dealing with issues like wolf depredation of livestock and pets and divert important endangered species funding and resources to the conservation of species that are truly at risk."

Wolf surveys are conducted annually during winter months, when snow cover affords suitable tracking conditions. The wolf population is at its lowest point during this time of year, so survey results are considered minimum counts. The population increases each spring with the birth of pups, then declines throughout the remainder of the year due to various mortality factors.

To view a summary of wolf monitoring information and to learn more about wolves in Wisconsin, visit dnr.wi.gov and search keyword "wolf." To learn more about the volunteer tracking program and opportunities to participate, search keywords "wolf volunteer tracking." Classes for new volunteer wolf trackers will be held later in 2018.

Trials for Tusks: An attorney's global retirement adventures are highlighted in a special presentation at Nicolet College

Every once in a while, a place captures your heart; for Ann Munninghoff Eshelman, that place is Africa. Eshelman's overseas adventures began in 2011, a few years after she retired from a successful career as a public defender. On Thursday, June 14 at 7:30 p.m. in the Nicolet College Theatre, Eshelman will present "Horns, Tusks and Teeth," a collection of memorable stories, photographs, artwork, and life-changing lessons.

Eshelman's African travels are grounded in a privately-owned game park called Imire, located in Zimbabwe. At Imire, the mission of the Travers family is to enhance the relationships between tourism, conservation programs and the well-being of local communities through long-term, sustainable environmental management and positive community projects. The Travers' operate a rhino breeding and release program, at which Eshelman volunteered. She joined in caring for other animals such as elephants, sable antelopes, giraffes, and Cape buffalo. She also forged relationships with many of the local residents.

Eshelman's trips to Africa all originate at Imire: she then ventures on from there. In Botswana, Eshelman spent time touring the Okavango River Delta

The Almost Hanging

By Mike Monte

A father and son are taking a drive through the countryside in northern Wisconsin. The son is at the wheel, and the father is looking over the countryside he used to know so well. Their destination is a town that used to be, a place that was built on high hopes that were unfounded, back in the early days of hardwood logging.

"Well look at that! The foundation's still there! There's a two-foot maple growing right where the pool table used to sit. You know Son, that was one of the wildest saloons you ever saw."

"Doesn't look wild anymore, unless you count the trees growing in and around the foundation," answered the son.

"That's true, but if you woulda been here sixty-five years ago, you'd know what I mean. All of us Jacks would gather here on paydays and celebrate. We were happy to be young and have some jingle in our pockets. This farmland wasn't here. It was woods, and we were turning the woods into logs as fast as we could. We worked hard for sure, and when we could play, we cut loose!"

The father slid out of the car and let his memories wash over him. "It's hard to believe that I am ninety years old. The countryside has changed completely since the last time I was here. The sodbusters put in a helluva lot of work to carve these farm fields out of the stumps we left, not to mention the stones. It's hard to say what would have happened to me if I hadn't met your mother. I probably would have been a lumberjack the rest of my days and finished my last days living in a shack in the woods, broke and sad. I certainly never thought I would work in her dad's hardware store and end up running it."

"Well Dad, from what I have been told, she had a hard time making a businessman out of you. She always said you were hard to house break too," the son said with a laugh.

"Yes, she had a job to do, but she was successful, and I still miss her."

The spry old ex-lumberjack looked down the road, and explained to his son that the old building that was now a well-kept home had once served as a general store that sold proceries, wool socks, shirts and pants and just about anything else that was needed in a community that didn't have fancy tastes. He was surprised to see the small barn still standing and in good repair that had once been a livery and also was used by the store owner to keep his horse and store his wagon, along with a mow full of loose hay and a granary that kept the oats. As he remembered, the storekeep also had a milk cow or two to fill his needs and to provide some milk to his customers. He looked again at the foundation of the old saloon, and walked over to the crumbling stone foundation. Memories flooded over him. Stepping over the foundation about where he remembered the door had been, it was like he had stepped back in time. He visualized the bar with the brass foot rail, the spittoons along that footrail and the back bar with mirrors that reflected the backs of the booze bottles. He remembered that the player piano had set against the far wall and in his mind's eye he saw the tables scattered around the perimeter of the bar room with the much repaired captain's chairs on all four sides of the tables. It was a good joint, and that's for sure. Then he remembered a drunken night with complete clarity, and he began to chuckle and then laugh aloud. He called his son over to share the remembrance.

But, all the logs were sleighed out, the sawmill paid up, and we all had what we thought was a lot of money. I know for a guy just turned twenty years old, it seemed like a whole lot of money. We were all celebratin' in this old saloon, and drinking a lot of whiskey and beer. Then trouble started.

There was a young logger that thought he was another Paul Bunyan, and he always thought he was being cheated on his log scale. His name was Pete, but we usually called him Dumbhead or something like it. He started an argument with the scaler about being cheated. The argument got hot, and, of course, they went outside to have a fist fight.

Ben, the scaler, got squared off and was ready to teach this young dummy a thing or two about throwing punches, when Pete pulled out a pistol and shot Ben in the chest."

"Good grief Dad! He shot him? Is that something to laugh about?"

"Just wait till you hear the whole story. We knew Pete had this old pistol. It was a cheap .32 short, and he had a bunch of old black powder shells. He was real proud of it, and we made fun of it.

It was quite a sight! Ol' Ben was laying there in the mud getting' ready to meet his maker. A couple of the boys knelt down by him, and he was giving them messages for his wife, who he figured he would never see again.

The boys were really pissed off. It was bad manners to shoot somebody in a fist fight. There Pete was standing with that revolver still in his hand, when somebody had the idea that Pete should be strung up for killing Ben. Some of the fellas grabbed him and took away the old pistol. One of the drunks said he would get a rope out of the barn across the road. I think that old barn still standing over there is the same barn. Pete started whinin' like a little kid, and was told to shut up and take it like a man! There was an argument about the proper way to tie a hangman's noose, and everybody being drunk didn't help get the job done either.

"So, Dad, you guys were just going to take the law into your own hands and hang Pete? Didn't anybody think to get a policeman?'

"Hell, there weren't no cops around here back then. It would have been two days ride just to scare up a deputy, and remember, it was breakup. The roads were runnin' with mud. It might have taken three days to find a deputy and another three days for him to ride here. There wasn't any blacktop roads or even gravel in them days. He was guilty, we all saw it. We would have hung the coward and buried him in that little cemetery over there, which I

"It was the end of the logging season, and the outfit I worked for all winter was a bit behind on the pay.

About that time, one of the fellas that was a woods boss pushed his way through the crowd. For some reason he wasn't stewed to the gills, and had enough sense to check out the wound on our dying friend. That took awhile. He had to work his way through a couple of wool shirts and long johns. It was a lot of buttons, but eventually, Ben's bare chest was there for everybody to see. There was no bullet hole! Everybody stood looking with surprise all over their mugs. The woods boss checked his shirt, and sure enough, there was a bullet hole in the left chest pocket, right over where his heart should be. He dug in the pocket, that was full of notebooks with all the log scale recorded, and there it was! The bullet from that weak sister pistol was lodged in a notebook! It never broke skin, but the wallop must have hurt like hell!

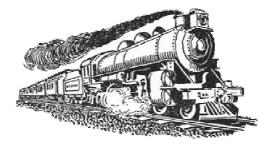

When my whiskey soaked friends saw that there was no hole and no blood, they started making fun of Ben, tellin' him he wasn't hurt none and he was a chicken shit for making all that fuss about dying. He got up and left.

Somebody asked if they were gonna hang Pete, and was told no. After all, he didn't hurt nobody. So we all went back in the saloon and drank more whiskey. Pete skedaddled, and nobody saw him after that." noticed has grown a bunch since them days. Ben had a homestead just down the road a ways, and we would have brought the widow the body, and she would have taken care of the burying, nice and proper.

It was hard work in the woods, but we had a helluva good time too. Them days make fine memories."

With a look of astonishment, the son said, "Yeah, Dad, I'm sorry I missed them!"

Author's Note: This story is a fictionalized account of an incident related to me by an old logger, Oliver Campbell, who was there when it happened and was one of the drunken jacks watching the event. As near as I can tell, it happened circa 1910.

McCaslin Lions host Children's Fisherv

On May 16th, the McCaslin Lions hosted their annual Kids Fishery. It was a beautiful day as over 50 special needs children, ages 6 to 10 years old from the Wabeno and White Lake school district were treated to a day at Silver Moon Springs Trout Farm in Elton, WI. Everyone had the opportunity to catch up to two fish, using fishing poles provided by the Lions. Lunch was served and prizes were awarded for several categories including the largest fish. The McCaslin Lions have been doing this event for over 18 years. This is a memorable event that the children look forward to from the first day of school. We appreciate Silver Moon Springs Trout Farm for allowing us to make this event such a success for the children. This is one of the many ways the McCaslin Lions support our communities

Nicolet College Criminal Justice Open House Cookout June 15

Anyone curious about the training it takes for a career in law enforcement is invited to the Nicolet College Criminal Justice Open House Cookout from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m., Friday, June 15, at the Birchwoods Center on the Rhinelander Campus.

"This is for individuals considering a career in law enforcement as well as members of the general public who are curious about the program and the training we provide," said Nicolet Criminal Justice Service Specialist Tim Gerdmann.

At the free event individuals will have the opportunity to participate in actual hands-on training scenarios pulled straight from Nicolet's Criminal Justice curriculum. This will include engaging an uncooperative suspect on the college's computerized use-of-force simulator and participating in mock traffic stops with the Nicolet squad car.

Along with instructors from the college's Criminal Justice program, current students, graduates, and officials from local law enforcement agencies will be on hand to talk about and answer questions about careers in law enforcement.

All graduates from Citizen's Academies conducted by police departments in Rhinelander and Minocqua are also invited to attend the open house and cookout.

Nicolet offers several college credentials in Criminal Justice. These include the one-year Corrections Specialist technical diploma; a pair of two-year associate's degrees, one for Criminal Justice Correctional Officer and the other in Criminal Justice Studies; and the 720-hour Law Enforcement Academy, which is required to work as a sheriff's deputy or police officer in Wisconsin.

It was a hot one at the 19th Annual Lioness Faire, but many folks came out and enjoyed the vendors, food, and kids activities on May 27th at the Lakewood Pavilion and Community Center.
